समन्वय

Samanvay, rooted in the Sanskrit words "Sama" (सम) for 'same' or 'equal,' and "Anvay" (अन्वय) for 'connection' or 'convergence,' represents the harmonious integration of diverse perspectives and expertise to strive towards a shared objective collectively.

Samanvay signifies the convergence and oneness of various stakeholders, resources, and initiatives in the Bharat Rural Livelihoods Foundation (BRLF) context to accomplish a shared vision of inclusive, sustainable, and equitable rural development for tribal and vulnerable communities.

Emerging Pathways for Inclusive Sustainable Livelihoods in India

जोहार!

Samanvay 2025, co-convened by BRLF and Axis Bank Foundation, aims to nurture a collective space for reflective multi-stakeholder dialogue focused on critical issues and opportunities in India's rural development landscape. We strive to nurture an emerging space for vibrant collaborations, shared learnings, and collective commitments to shared visions and innovative pathways to inclusive and sustainable livelihoods in tribal geographies, where systemic challenges often hinder equitable development. Samanvay seeks to cultivate the confluence of ideas, experiences, knowledge and learnings of all stakeholders in India's rural development narrative, including civil society organisations, corporate entities, government bodies, people's institutions, tribal communities, and young leaders.

BRLF recognises that achieving sustainable rural development requires collective and consistent efforts from civil society, government and the corporate sector. Samanvay serves as a platform for stakeholders to come together, exchange knowledge, share effective strategies, and highlight and celebrate innovations that have already made a positive, enduring impact. This diverse gathering shall outline and showcase effective strategies of various institutions and organisations towards ensuring economic and social security, addressing both immediate challenges and long-term goals of equity and inclusion in rural development initiatives.

At Samanvay, we celebrate the collective wisdom, joy, and fortitude of tribal knowledge, culture, and practices, which are crucial to achieving India's sustainable development goals. We acknowledge and celebrate this embodied wisdom of equity, inclusion, and harmony in weaving strategies for resilience and regeneration in sustainable livelihood initiatives. Through shared experiences and co-learning, BRLF hopes to inspire participants to incorporate these cultural insights into their development frameworks, ensuring that tribal perspectives remain central in discussions about rural transformation.

EMERGING PATHWAYS FOR INCLUSIVE SUSTAINABLE LIVELIHOODS IN INDIA

FEBRUARY 20, 2025

Samanvay 2025 focuses on exploring collaborations and shared commitments toward Emerging Pathways for Inclusive Sustainable Livelihoods in India.

The first day of Samanvay 2025 seeks to lay the path for Government, CSO, and corporate collaborations towards co-creating a vibrant ecosystem and holistic on-ground impacts for sustainable livelihoods in tribal geographies of India. We aim to explore and co-create key principles, institutional architecture, and design inputs for transformative interventions with the potential to catalyse appropriate and enduring systemic and cultural shifts. The day-long explorations will bring together successful prototypes of sustainable livelihood interventions in the country's tribal geographies and grounded learnings emerging from challenges faced by communities, CSOs, and the government.

Samanvay 2025 seeks to curate a space that inspires all participating stakeholders to leverage our collective strengths to formulate equitable and scalable solutions for rural development.

The event contributes to various institutions' existing policy and practice framework by scaffolding reflective and critical dialogues on emerging collaborative, sustainable livelihood initiatives models. We hope that the pathways emerging from Samanvay 2025 will lay the foundation for flourishing narratives, holistic interventions and new partnerships to emerge in different parts of the country.

BRLF aspires to inspire renewed commitments from all stakeholders through subsequent regional gatherings that will further the explorations made in Samanvay 2025. We hope that the annual gathering of Samanvay 2025 and the subsequent renewed commitments emerging from regional gatherings will allow new and emerging strategies to take ground to enhance collaborative outcomes of GO-NGO initiatives in addressing challenges associated with poverty and sustainable livelihoods, as well as enable a responsive ecosystem for collective action on key initiatives that uplift marginalised communities and contribute to a broader vision of inclusive rural development.

CELEBRATING PARTNERSHIPS FOR SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT

FEBRUARY 21, 2025

Samanvay – “Celebrating Partnerships for Sustainable Development.” focuses on gathering key partners, including civil society organisations (CSOs), government departments, donors, and community representatives, to reflect on the crucial collaborations that have driven BRLF’s mission forward.

This celebration aims to acknowledge and honour the critical partnerships that have facilitated successes in advancing sustainable livelihoods and inclusive rural development in tribal regions. By creating a platform for stakeholders to celebrate shared achievements, BRLF emphasises the importance of collaboration in fostering sustainable change.

Recognising its partners' dedication, innovation, and teamwork is vital for inspiring ongoing commitment and encouraging future collaborations that support equitable rural development. The event highlights the invaluable contributions of various stakeholders, from grassroots organisations operating in remote areas to corporate donors providing essential support and government bodies enabling large-scale initiatives.

The celebration commemorates past achievements and reaffirms the collective vision of fostering a just and sustainable future for India’s tribal communities. By honouring these efforts, BRLF reinforces the spirit of collective ownership that is integral to its work.

Believing that sustainable development cannot be achieved without respecting cultural richness, BRLF provides a space for tribal voices to be heard through stories, performances, and cultural showcases. This underscores the deep connection between culture, identity, and sustainable livelihoods.

BRLF celebrates its CSO partners, donors, government allies, and community members through awards and recognitions, showcasing the diverse yet unified efforts that contribute to meaningful change. This recognition reminds us that while progress has been made, much work remains achievable only through continued collaboration and mutual trust.

The event aims to look ahead with renewed purpose, fostering appreciation for the power of partnerships in creating lasting impacts and ensuring that BRLF and its partners remain committed to building a brighter and more equitable future for India’s rural and tribal communities.

PANEL DISCUSSIONS

Harnessing the Potential of MGNREGA for Inclusive and Sustainable Livelihoods.

BRLF envisions sustainable livelihoods as a pathway to holistic prosperity, empowerment, and dignity for vulnerable rural communities, especially women and Adivasis. BRLF's mission is to transform the lives and livelihoods of these communities by collaborating with governments, civil society organisations (CSOs), and other stakeholders to enhance civil society action in the effective implementation of flagship schemes like MGNREGA. For the fiscal year 2024-25, INR 86000 crores have been allocated for asset creation under the MGNREGA. This scheme was designed to provide relief during times of distress and promote long-term drought and flood-proofing of Indian agriculture, transforming "Today's wage into Tomorrow's livelihood." The benefits structured by the Act aim to guide the economy towards a more sustainable growth trajectory, making it less vulnerable to climate fluctuations and more effective in reducing poverty.

Furthermore, MGNREGA aims to decrease dependency on state-sponsored work guarantees over time, allowing communities to engage in advanced agriculture and other entrepreneurial activities independently. This model enhances sustainability, ensuring that the funds spent on employment guarantee yield productive outcomes both environmentally and fiscally. To this end, the panel will share strategies adopted by government and NGO collaborative initiatives to promote equity and inclusion in the planning and utilisation of MGNREGA allocations for improved results.

The panel will delve into field intervention experiences that encourage the participation of women and marginalised communities in the planning processes. The panel shall inquire into ecological, economic, social, and cultural dimensions of MGNREGA implementation. We seek to gain wholistic perspectives and build operational insights for enhanced process efficiency while ensuring a sustained, long-term shift towards sustainable rural livelihoods for all. We expect the discussions to explore successes and failures, challenges and critical turning points in the strategies shared by the panellists. We aim to identify core design and practice principles that should inform the framework of large-scale sustainable livelihood initiatives, enabling effective on-ground GO-NGO collaborations.

Emerging Prototypes for Diversified Livelihood Strategies

Diversified livelihood strategies can foster a conservation-oriented and regenerative approach to our food systems. Accelerating the adoption of sustainable production methods and technologies is urgently needed to achieve tipping points for systemic change within the agri-food sector. This panel will focus on emerging prototypes of livelihood interventions that integrate enhanced practices for top-soil regeneration, organic matter restoration, biodiversity enhancement, and increased water retention and groundwater recharge capacity. Integrated farming systems across various agroecological zones represent one such practice with the potential to provide sustainable income to farmers while positively contributing to the ecological cycles in which these production and farm management systems operate. When these practices are combined with social change processes that promote equity and inclusion, they can catalyse complex transformative systems.

Through this panel discussion, we aim to explore the potential of emerging prototypes to address the complex challenges faced by agricultural and sustainable livelihoods in tribal and vulnerable communities. Using a critical line of inquiry, we will identify emerging technologies, prototypes, and models demonstrating exemplary impact while abstracting the core principles for successful livelihood interventions in different agro-ecological zones.

PANEL DISCUSSIONS

Nurturing Resilience through Future Ready Community Institutions

Significant social capital is embedded in community institutions such as Collectives and Farmer Producer Organizations (FPOs). Numerous studies highlight the challenges faced by FPOs in the country today, stemming from the complex policy landscape, the emerging need for diversified mandates, and the necessity for an institutional structure that promotes agency, resilience, and equity with autonomous and effective governance.

The panel will discuss a framework for community institutions that fosters the convergence of resources and expertise while strengthening the structures and systems that embody their members' equity and agency. This approach aims to create effective, credible, and resilient institutions capable of responding to the challenges posed by climate change and the country's increasing social inequities. Through the panel discussions, we aim to develop a blueprint for future-ready community organisations.

The conversations will focus on defining the nature and structure of these institutions in India. By sharing existing prototypes and exploring their potential, the deliberations will highlight key design principles, policy considerations, and interventions that cultivate an ecosystem of inclusive and effective community institutions with the power to enable sustainable rural livelihoods for all.

New ways of Organising: Collaborative Advantage – State Partnership Models

Significant public investments are being made in India to strengthen the rural economy and improve the livelihoods of vulnerable communities, particularly tribal populations and women. Optimising collaborative advantages through inter-sectoral partnerships is essential to tackle poverty and promote sustainable livelihoods. This approach will facilitate the convergence of resources, infrastructure, and expertise at multiple levels.

Over the past few decades, numerous initiatives have emerged across the country, highlighting the potential of the convergence approach. The panel on “New Ways of Organizing for Collaborative Advantage” aims to deepen our understanding of the processes and key elements involved in designing and developing collaborative impact models. Discussions will focus on what is required to create an institutional bricolage architecture, which allows key stakeholders' collective wisdom, knowledge, resources, and expertise to come together and enhance development processes.

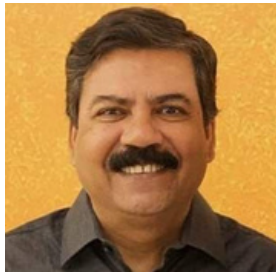

The BRLF state partnership model has successfully enabled communities, people's institutions, government entities, civil society organisations, ecosystem enablers, and funding organisations to collaboratively design and implement sustainable livelihood strategies grounded in equity, inclusion, and operational excellence. While the panel will showcase curated experiences of implementing strategies, key principles, and operational designs that inform the blueprint of institutional architecture for such multi-sectoral collaborative initiatives, it will also encourage participants to reflect on vulnerabilities or weaknesses in these initiatives to identify future pathways for solutions.

MAJOR HIGHLIGHTS FOLK AND CULTURAL PRESENTATION

MAATI KAHE

Songs & Stories from the Field

Maati Kahe is an emotive, reflective musical performance that has evolved from many years' field experiences with various ecological contexts and communities and resistance efforts for peace and dignity. It explores people's joy, pain and dreams through a rich and diverse ensemble of self-created soulful songs and traditional melodies.

Vinay and Charul sensitively weave together personal and collective narratives with traditional wisdom, taking the audience to the urban and rural landscapes, to the little Rann of Kutch, hills, farms, rivers and ecological communities. They offer a unique experience into an 'unheard' and often 'invisible' world.

Vinay and Charul are professionals by qualification, researchers, and singer-songwriter musicians by choice and passion. Vinay is an Agricultural Engineer and a management post-graduate from IIM, Ahmedabad. Charul is an Architect and a post-graduate from CEPT, Ahmedabad.
